Introduction

A landmark development at the southern gateway to the city centre, overlooking Riad El Solh Square and Gibran Khalil Gibran monumental garden, the UN House was designed to accommodate several United Nations local and regional agencies.

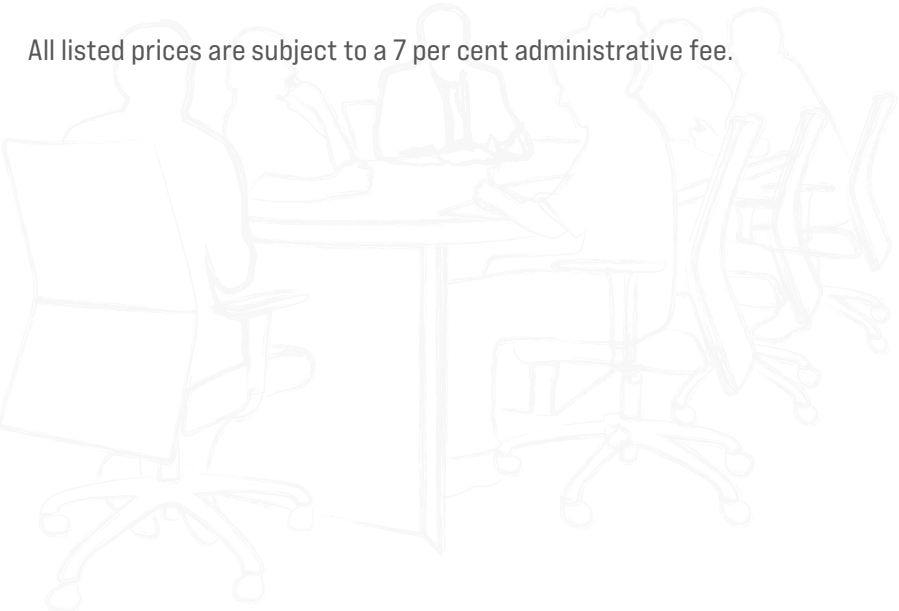

Inaugurated by then Secretary General Kofi Annan in February 1998, the UN House is one of the most sought out conference facilities in the region, and has had the distinction of receiving a multitude of dignitaries and high-ranking officials from all over the world, including former Secretary-Generals Kofi Annan and Ban Ki-moon, and current Secretary General António Guterres. Under the purview of the Resources Management and Service Development Division (RMSDD), the Conference Management Section (CMS) manages the UN House meetings calendar and coordinates all events taking place at the UN House. CMS provides a range of conference related services including conference room bookings, simultaneous interpretation, virtual platform coordination, translation and reproduction of documents.

Overview

Located in the heart of Beirut, where history and modernity meet, the UN House is an eight-stratum building that hosts 16 meeting and conference rooms equipped with a range of technology in addition to one lounge. The UN House is a one-stop shop for conference and event organizers, offering services such as conference planning, registration and accreditation of participants, exhibition layout, design and printing of branding materials. The UN House facilities are fully equipped to support all conferences and events in the physical, virtual and hybrid modes. This guide details the available meeting rooms at the UN House. For co-locating entities at the UN House, the use of meeting rooms on floors 3 to 7 is complimentary.

All listed prices are subject to a 7 per cent administrative fee.
